

Arizona Voter Roll Fact Sheet 2024

Key Facts

Every county in Arizona continually removes ineligible voter records

In Arizona, an inaccurate registration rarely leads to a fraudulent vote cast

Arizona's proof of citizenship requires a higher bar for registration

Every county in Arizona continually removes ineligible voter records

Our analysis of Arizona's voter file data since the start of 2020 shows that 26% of all voter records have been inactivated or removed, and every county has maintained its records consistent with federal and state requirements. In most cases, systematic inactivations have taken place twice a year and removals have taken place multiple times per month.

Between the last Presidential Election on November 3, 2020 and August 22, 2024:

- Approximately 1 million unique active records have been inactivated (21% of all unique active records in the voter file during this period).
- Approximately 724 thousand unique records have been removed (11% of all unique records in the voter file during this period).
- In total, approximately 1.7 million unique voter records have been removed or inactivated (26% of all unique records during this period).

There is no "correct" amount of inactivations or removals we can expect each year, since state populations are constantly changing in varied ways. But there is a clear, lawful process that produces measurable outcomes.¹

In Arizona, an inaccurate registration rarely leads to a fraudulent vote cast

In the 2020 general election, more than 3.4 million Arizonans voted.² Of those ballots cast, only 22 specific allegations of voter fraud were referred for prosecution, or less than 0.001% of ballots cast.³ The conservative Heritage Foundation identified only 3 cases that ended in convictions, representing less than one in a million votes in the election.⁴

Several additional processes keep ineligible voters from registering to vote and casting a ballot:

- Registration: Arizona residents can register to vote in person, online, or via mail. In person and mail registrations require a confirmation of address, or an affirmation that the voter does not have an address, and online registration requires a state driver's license or ID.⁵

¹ Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 16-165, Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 16-166

² https://apps.azsos.gov/election/2020/2020_general_state_convass.pdf

³ Arizona Attorney General Special Investigations Memorandum

⁴ <https://www.heritage.org/voterfraud/search?state=AZ>

⁵ <https://azsos.gov/elections/voters/registering-vote>

- In-Person Voting: Voters must provide one form of photo identification or two forms of non-photo identification when they vote in person. If a voter cannot provide proof of identity, they will be issued a provisional ballot – which will only be counted if the voter can provide proof of identity to the County Recorder by the 5th day following the general election.⁶
- Mail Voting: Counties can require that a voter provide an identification number, such as a driver's license number or partial Social Security number, in order to request a mail ballot.⁷

Arizona's proof of citizenship requires a higher bar for registration

Cross-partisan election experts concur that "noncitizens voting in federal elections are virtually nonexistent."⁸ Despite the lack of any evidence that noncitizen voting could impact elections, Arizona has imposed additional burdens on registration that risk disenfranchising voters who do not have easy access to documents that prove their citizenship.

Before registering a new voter, election officials take steps to verify the voter's citizenship. Depending on whether they use a federal or state voter registration form, new Arizona voters must either provide proof of U.S. citizenship or sign an attestation that they are a U.S. citizen in order to register to vote. If the applicant uses the federal form without providing documentary proof of citizenship but signs the attestation of citizenship, they will be registered to vote in federal elections per the National Voter Registration act but cannot vote in state elections.⁹ Additionally, when an applicant uses the federal voter registration form, election officials look for proof of the applicant's U.S. citizenship in government records such as from the Motor Vehicle Division. If the officials find proof of citizenship, the applicant will become registered for both state and federal elections. If proof of non-citizenship is found, their application will be rejected and they will be unable to register to vote for any election. If the voter applicant uses the state form and does not provide proof of citizenship, their application will be rejected and they will be unable to register to vote for any election.

In addition, there are criminal penalties, both for potential voters who knowingly submit false information on their applications and for government officials who knowingly process registration applications with unverified eligibility.

Protect Democracy is a nonpartisan, nonprofit group of experts working to prevent authoritarianism.

CONTACT: Travis Bruner - Arizona State Policy Advocate - (928) 508-3022, travis.bruner@protectdemocracy.org

⁶ <https://azsos.gov/elections/voters/voting-elections/election-day-voting>

⁷ <https://tracker.votingrightslab.org/states/arizona#requesting-mail-ballots>

⁸ <https://electiontaskforce.org/rebutting-allegations-of-widespread-voter-fraud-by-noncitizens/>

⁹ <https://azsos.gov/elections/about-elections/elections-procedures/vr-procedures>